OSCP PREP

TIPS FROM GEORGE RAILEANU,
CONTENT DEVELOPER AT OFFSEC

Time management, practicing on boxes, and ironing out a methodology are my best pieces of advice.

In addition to the PEN-200 lab boxes, there are a good number of PG boxes that are very similar (some say harder) to the exam.

The more boxes you work on, the better your methodology and time management becomes.

Use walkthroughs in a smart way. Take your time to really struggle, that's where there's potential to learn something long term.

Walkthroughs should be the last resort to throw you a bone or explain a concept you may not have fully understood.

Having milestones to keep you on track (and a mentor) can help with reducing the chances of time slipping past you.